

One of the greatest exploits in journalism was the discovery by the New York Times that our schools had virtually quit teaching American history—and for that nation-wide survey and report the Times won the Pulitzer prize.

How, indeed, can you expect to perpetuate self-government if the people don't know enough history to judge what is going on in their own generation? For the Past is the Present's parent, its adviser, rule-maker—and chastiser.

I am reminded of this by a reprint from World War II which a friend has just handed me. I've seen it before—and the fact that it is being revived now is an indication that at least the people are doing some critical thinking instead of accepting in blind faith all the rigmarole of price and wage control that is coming out of Washington.

This reprint goes on to say that price and wage control, far from being modern devices, have been tried for thousands of years—and have always failed. I quote:

"The Babylonians in the years 2285 to 2242 B. C. had wage controls for boatmen, reapers, threshers, shepherds, laborers, artisans, brick layers, tillers, stone cutters, milkmen and carpenters. Builders' fees were regulated as were the fees for warehouse rentals, rental of cows, rentals of cows in milk, calves, oxen, wagons, freight and bamboo boats. It brought to Babylon poverty, destitution, and higher taxes."

The article goes on to say that after a skip of a thousand years the Hittites, in 1350 B. C., ignoring the fate of the Babylonians, likewise set up wage and price control—and likewise vanished from the earth.

In Roman empire days, we read, the emperor Diocletian tried the same thing. I quote:

"His edict read like that promulgated by Mr. Roosevelt some years ago and by Mr. Truman some months ago. Diocletian pitched his plea on the highest motives of making the whole nation participate in the blessings of that peace in which we have laboriously striven."

"In May of 305 A. D. Romans had had enough of Mr. Diocletian and they kicked out his wage control law which was enforceable by death. The Romans had a rather practical reason for doing this. The storekeepers and other businessmen, unable to understand and therefore unable to abide by the Diocletian edict, all closed up their shops and there was nothing for the Romans to buy."

"That was the end of the Diocletian Price Control era. Shortly after, Diocletian resigned his emperorship. Shortly after that he committed suicide."

I could go on quoting at length. But the fact is that price and wage control was tried a few centuries ago in France, under Robespierre, ending July 23, 1794, with the beheading of Price Regulator Robespierre.

Wise of all was our own Continental Congress, which, after an attempt to control Revolutionary War prices, abandoned it and adopted the following resolution:

"It hath been found by experience that limitation in the price of commodities is not only ineffective for the purpose proposed, but likewise productive of very evil consequences to the great detriment of the public service and grievous oppression of individuals."

I can think of a more recent and even deadlier parallel: If you can't prohibit a luxury item like liquor, how can you regulate the absolute necessities of life?

Governmental price control is all right for those in the government, but the man in the street who has read a little history knows it for what it really is—a lot of political preaching with very little actual practice.

Sherman Calls for Blockade of Red China

Washington, May 30 — (AP) — Admiral Forrest P. Sherman testified today he hopes for "an effective United Nations commercial and naval blockade" of Red China, but believes the United States should not undertake one alone.

Sherman, chief of naval operations, said Russia might oppose with force any sea blockade the United States declared on its own and without U. N. backing. He said he believed the Russians might respect one by the United Nations.

Sherman was testifying at the senate inquiry into the dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur for publicly advocating a naval blockade and other measures to hit directly at the Chinese Communists for intervening in the Korean fighting.

The navy chief said he supports the Truman administration's Korean war policy, as opposed to MacArthur's proposals and believes there is a "good prospect" of defeating the Chinese Red armies in Korea and ending the fighting there on terms "advantageous to us."

Senator Bridges (R-NH) asked if Sherman would "favor a different strategy" in Korea "if the present plan doesn't work."

"Well, definitely," Sherman said, "if we are not successful in defeating the Chinese army, destroying its power, or alternatively, causing it to withdraw, cease."

By NATE POLOWETZKY

Pusan, Korea, May 30 — (AP) — Soldiers of this newest war bowed their heads in a green hillside cemetery in a Memorial day tribute to the Americans who have died at Belleau Wood, Okinawa and now Taejon and Hagaru.

Memorial Day, 1951 —

REST IN PEACE

By Elsie Karlin

REST in peace, brave men who died for me;
Sad men who left the lives you loved so well;
Kind men who fought to keep me strong and free;
Rest beneath the ground on which you fell.

The drums of battle have not yet been stilled,
And horror rides astride on aeroplanes;
Each day more early graves are being filled,
But rest, your sacrifice was not in vain.

You shielded me from blackness of despair,
And kept abroad the threat of foreign wars;
Because of you I breathe in freedom's air,
And can make plans for future happy days.

Rest in peace, brave men; your memory

Will not grow dim as long as I am free.

Rain, Stubborn Reds Slow U. S. Korean Push

Tokyo, May 30 — (AP) — Heavy rains and determined Red fighting from water-filled trenches slowed Allied spearheads against Communist Korea.

Nevertheless, field dispatchers reported United Nations troops fought to within 12 miles of Pyongyang, communist base in central Korea, and seized another road above Inje on the eastern front.

In Tokyo, Gen. Matthew B. Ryan, supreme Allied commander, said the Reds were severely defeated in their spring offensive, still were determined and capable of renewed daring assaults.

Heavy rains swept most of the battlefield this Memorial day morning in Korea's traditional rainy season. Zero visibility and air attacks to 190 sorties.

Red troops, seizing the advantage, lashed back at supply lines on the eastern front. A Communist attack on the South Korean defenses on the Inje-Hyon road, Reds set up road blocks both sides of Inje, covering the roads with bazooka and machine gun fire.

An American armored force fought through heavy fire and mud before seizing a strategic road junction six miles north of Inje.

Rescue Crews Dig for Buried Miners

Easington, England, May 30 — (AP) — Rescue squads burrowed through debris-choked tunnels today on the slim hope that some of the 62 men buried by a violent mine explosion would still be found alive. Seventeen others are known dead.

The rescue work continued throughout the night and today after an early morning blast yesterday trapped 70 men 900 feet underground at Easington colliery, 20 miles south of Newcastle.

Sixteen bodies have been recovered. One badly injured miner died in a hospital last night. One rescue worker died in the mine. The number of missing men was reduced when two miners were discovered safe at home.

"Hope is receding. It is not a forlorn hope, although it will be something in the nature of a miracle if any of men now get out alive," a mine official told newsmen.

The rescue work went on throughout the night, while a small cluster of relatives gathered quietly in the glare of the big spot-light at the pit head. Names of survivors, they were told, would be posted on the bulletin board there—but there were none this morning.

On the board was a message from King George VI. "The queen and I," he said, "have learnt with deepest regret of the explosion at Easington colliery and of the severe loss of life. We sent our heartfelt sympathy to all those who have lost husbands or sons."

The explosion occurred in a winding tunnel about a mile and a quarter from the deep vertical shaft leading to the surface. Mounds of rock and coal blocked the way to the coal face where most of the men were working. As each mound was opened, there usually was a rush of poisoned air. Rescue teams with gas masks and walkie-talkie radios clawed their way through the tunnel. They said their present rate of progress through the debris would mean they probably would not reach the missing men for another two days.

There were six emergency phones in the blast area where the men had been working, but no calls came through.

If none of the 62 men are brought up alive, the Easington explosion will be Britain's worst coal mine disaster since 104 were killed in August, 1947, at Whitehaven. Last September 80 men died in a fire in a mine at Creswell.

Last night and Sunday, two transports brought in 1,300 foot soldiers each. More are scheduled to arrive in the next few days.

Revenue Department Take Is a Record

Little Rock, May 30 — (AP) — The Arkansas revenue department took in a record $87,449,893 in taxes in the 1950-51 revenue year.

The total was an increase of approximately $5,700,000 over the amount collected in 1949-50.

The state closed its books on the 1950-51 year yesterday.

Early this year state fiscal officers said they feared a decrease in revenues. Unexpectedly large payments — especially of state income taxes — resulted, instead, in the all-time record.

State Comptroller Lee Roy Beasley said that because of the big collections, the state will be able to distribute an additional $950,000 to the public school fund, the public institutions fund, the colleges, cities and counties.

They were accompanied home by their mother, Mrs. Betty Fletcher of Ozark.

Mrs. Eddie Bean of Atlanta, Ga., arrived Monday for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Glen L. Williams. She will be an attendant at the Benson-McGee wedding Sunday.

DOROTHY DIX

Wrong Crowd

Dear Miss Dix: I am a young married woman. Before I married I worked in a large, office led an active, clean life. My husband is a domestic man, loves his home, and we are very happy together. Regardless of what party we are invited to it consists mainly of husbands and wives having petting parties with somebody else's wife or husband, drinking, telling vulgar stories, yelling and singing. I am no prude, but all of this is repulsive to me and I would much rather stay home with a book or listen to the radio.

The result of all this is that the crowd rarely comes near us because we are too slow for them, and we really have few friends. What's the matter with us? Were we born a generation too late?

MRS. E. M. M.

Answer: I would say that what's the matter with you is that you are too decent and self-respecting for the rowdy crowd that you have fallen in with, and my advice to you is to beat them to the dropping position and do it first. Don't worry about their laughing at you and calling you slow. Just wait ten years and see which one of you has got along best in the world.

A Common Pitfall

You are confronting one of the greatest dangers that menace every young married couple, and that is getting into the wrong crowd. I have watched many of these groups of young married people who consider themselves very broad-minded because they indulge in drinking bouts and regaled each other with obscene stories and swapped partners. No cut-and-dried ideas of morality. No jealousy. Oh, dear me, no. They were far too liberal for that.

But in the end it wasn't so funny after all. For there seem to be certain fundamental rules of nature and conduct that we can't joke with. Being broad-minded doesn't give you a stomach that can stand being outcast by those who are decent and self-respecting. It leaves a headache and shattered nerves. It leaves a debauch, and petting parties between an assorted group of husbands and wives, whose carresses belong by right to their wives, doesn't promote family peace and harmony. It leads to fights and squabbles and divorce.

And so, my dear Mrs. M., if you have got into that sort of crowd, get out while the getting is good and you still have your husband. There are plenty of nice crowds of nice young people. Find one of them.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a girl 26 years old, going with a man ten years older. He loves me, I know, and I love him very much but since he discovered I went out with an ex-boy friend just once he said he can't trust me. He said he is afraid I would be unfaithful if he did marry me, but prior to hearing of my date, he never had mentioned marriage. Since he is 36 I have a feeling he doesn't want to marry at all and that this is just an excuse. What do you think?

JULIA

Answer: Your summing up of the situation is just exactly right. There is little doubt that your friend is all-around and has pointed on the first motive he could find for letting you know it. After all, if he has never mentioned marriage to you, he certainly has no right to object to your dating someone else. I don't think the difference in your ages has anything to do with the situation; he has just never used to bachelorhood and is loath to change his way of living. Even if you could throw a halter around his neck and lead him to church, you probably wouldn't be happy with him. A confirmed bachelor makes a very unsatisfactory husband. Let him go, and you find a husband in greener pastures.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Will you give me some suggestions on the following:

1. How to practice being tactful.
2. How to combat the after-effects of tactless remarks by others.

RAY

Answer: The Golden Rule is the best example of tact I know. "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." Keep that in mind and you'll say the thoughtless, cutting things that hurt people. Make it part of your daily living and you'll be practicing tact in the best possible manner. When a tactless remark is made by another, the best thing to do is smooth the situation over by a change of subject or, if possible, turning the thoughtless words into a joke.

Probers Aim Death Blow at Racing Wires

Washington, May 30 — (AP) — The senate crime investigating committee has aimed what it calls a "death blow" at interstate race wires which it says are "the very life blood of illegal gambling operations."

The committee yesterday introduced two bills which it said probably were the most important to come out of its nation-wide probe of criminal activities. Both bills, of course, need approval of the senate and house and the President to become effective.

One would make it illegal for anyone to send information by wire or radio about horse and dog races without obtaining a federal communications commission license. Newspapers, news services and radio stations would be exempted.

In that respect, the bill falls far short of a Florida measure due to become law today, provided Governor Fuller Warren doesn't veto it.

That bill prohibits Florida distribution or publication in newspapers or anywhere else of horse racing information which could be used "in furtherance of illegal gambling."

Attorney General Richard Erwin said he would forbid newspaper publication of race entries "at all the horse tracks which are running in the United States on any day, and information on jockeys, weights, withdrawals or scratches, betting odds and handicappers' choices."

The senate crime committee's bill would refuse a license to anyone who could not prove the information would not be used to facilitate gambling. The license company of the purpose for which they sought a communications facility. The companies would have to keep lists of all points.

The swiftness of the bill is the fastest of all birds, being able to outdistance an airplane flying 100 miles an hour.

Tucson, Ariz., May 30 On the night that Ray Folsom, a union painter, was shot by Ralph Howard Alsup, a gunman who admitted labor in Clark county, Nev., which includes Las Vegas, Alsup vanished quickly, being assisted in his flight, according to the sworn statement by James King, the business agent of the painters union.

Alsup is the most vicious criminal I have encountered in all my years of investigation. He holds office in the plumbers union but is not a qualified plumber. All his five criminal convictions in Texas and one in Nevada his sentences total up to 33 years, including a two-year sentence for shooting Folsom, which is now on appeal.

His crimes in Texas included two cases of robbery with fire-arms. Counting a gun-case in Las Vegas in which he beat the rap, although it was shown that he did have a gun when he went out to slay local business man, he has had four gun charges.

An official of the Texas prison system wrote, in answer to an inquiry, that Alsup had a provisional pardon. In a subsequent prosecution of Alsup in Las Vegas for gun-toting, Robert A. Jones, the county attorney, held that the pardon was unconditional.

Alsup is president of the central labor council of Clark Co., president of the county metal trades council, business agent of the county plumbers' union and vice-president of the state federation of labor.

After Alsup got away from the union hall where Folsom was shot through the body, he went to the home of George E. Franklin, Jr., an attorney, who opposed Senator Pat McCarran in last year's Democratic primary. Franklin received for his campaign $5,000 from the letter-headed front called the committee on national affairs, Waldorf Tower, New York. This front is run by Arthur J. Goldsmith, the money politician who snarls fire from his luxurious lair in the tower but, for secret political reasons, disguises the address as 160 East 80th street.

Franklin, who is a war hero with a distinguished service record, admits that Alsup went straight to him that night but explains that he was then chairman of the board of county commissioners and therefore had temporarily retired from private practice. John Conlon, who has been treasurer of Franklin's campaign and received $5,000 in contributions from Goldsmith's letter-headed front, was present with Franklin when Alsup came in.

Alsup was accompanied by Tam Hanley, local president and international vice president of the sheet metal workers and secretary-treasurer of the county central labor council. Alsup had a superficial wound on his head. District Attorney Roger Foley, who convicted him of the Folsom shooting, insists that this scarlet was self-inflicted to create an impression that the unprovoked shooting of Folsom occurred in a fight.

Franklin said he immediately told Alsup that he could not represent him. He said Conlon withdrew and did not take part in the conversation. Franklin said he did not know

Anti-Red Group Wins in Italy

HOPE, May 29 (AP) — An anti-communist coalition has broken the Communist wing held in Italy's provincial elections.

Protestors returned today in the province of Calabria to find the Communist Party had given the victory to the anti-communist coalition.

Communist forces were kicked out of provincial capital elections. They had held since 1946, after the forces took a heavy loss of council seats in elections which ended yesterday for a vote of the nation. The rest of the vote is later.

Results of interior results in 350 provincial council seats gave the anti-communist bloc a comfortable majority. The Communist Party, the Republican Party, and anti-communist socialists in 350 places to 104 for Communist-led wing Socialists.

Results indicated that anti-communist forces will control Italy's provincial capital elections. Communist-led "two" and "three" are undecided.

Even Justices Split on Law Definition

By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, May 30 (AP) — If you were a Supreme court justice and had to interpret the meaning of laws passed by congress would you be guided by what congress had in mind when it was passing the laws or would you just stick to what the laws themselves said or didn't say?

You won't be alone, whichever side you take on that question, because you'll have some of the nine Supreme court justices agreeing with you. They're divided among themselves on what they should do in a case like this.

This point of difference among the justices came to light again recently when the court gave a decision on a law passed by congress in 1937 — the Miller-Tydings act — which said what business men could do among themselves in fixing prices.

Justice Douglas wrote the opinion of the court majority and, in order to support the majority viewpoint, he did what justices always do: he cited other laws and previous court decisions which, he thought, bore out his argument. That's common practice.

But then Douglas went further than that. He roled through the records back in 1937 to see what the members of congress had in mind, or said they had in mind, when they were drawing up the Miller-Tydings act and then debating it. Others before him have done the same.

Douglas said he was looking for clues as to what congress meant the law to do. But this was a little too much for Justice Jackson an vice Minton. Although they were part of the majority which joined with Douglas in handing down the decision, they disagreed strongly with some of Douglas' reasoning in arriving at the decision.

Said Jackson: "To select casual statements from floor debates, not always distinguished for candor or accuracy, as a basis for making up our minds what law congress

Red China has moved circumspectly and methodically in taking over Tibet. There has been no rush or bluster. But neither has there been any concealment of the trend which pointed clearly to virtual annexation of the little state by huge China.

India saw all this coming. And many Far Eastern observers have held that she was the only nation which might have prevented Peiping from carrying out this assumption of control in Tibet.

But India chose not to intervene. Whether this will be a matter of deep regret to the New Delhi government remains to be seen. Certainly it is easy to interpret this Tibetan move as a tightening of the lines about the great Indian peninsula.

Mr. Nehru is right in saying that "we live in a perilous age." And India is in a particularly precarious position. Whether she is wise in holding her peace in the face of the hazards is for the future to determine.

Hotel Furnishings Bring $87,481

New York, May 30 (AP) — An auction of the furnishings of the Ritz Carlton hotel has netted $87,481. The sale, conducted by William H. O'Reilly, ended yesterday with bidding on 122 lots of kitchen equipment, chairs, drapes, cabinets, beds and other articles had been sold on previous days.

O'Reilly said the auction had "exceeded our expectations."

The hotel is being razed to make way for a modern office skyscraper.

Intended to enact is to substitute ourselves for the congress in one of its important functions.

"For us to undertake to reconstruct an enactment from legislative history is merely to involve the court in political controversies which are quite proper in enactment of a bill but should have no place in its interpretation."

In short, Jackson said, the court in interpreting a law should try to stick to what the law says — the wording of the law — and not to what members of congress said when they were putting the words together.

And he added: "Laws are intended for all of our people to live by; and the people go to law officers to learn what their rights under those laws are."

"Aside from a few offices in the larger cities, the materials of legislative history (the records of congressional hearings and debates) are not available to the lawyer who can afford neither the cost of acquisition, the cost of housing, or the cost of repeatedly examining the whole congressional history."

"Moreover, if he could he would not know any way of anticipating what would impress enough members of the court to be controlling. To accept legislative debates to modify statutory provisions is to make the law inaccessible to a large part of the country."

"By and large, I think our function was well stated by Mr. Justice Holmes: 'We do not inquire what the legislator meant; we ask only what the statute means.'"

But something else happened. Justices Frankfurter, Black and Burton disagreed with Douglas, Jackson, Minton and the others who were all part of the majority in reaching the decision in the case. Frankfurter wrote a dissenting opinion.

And — he went back to the congressional debates, just as Douglas did, but in deciding what congress meant he came to the opposite conclusion from Douglas.

Mr. Nehru is right in saying that "we live in a perilous age." And India is in a particularly precarious position. Whether she is wise in holding her peace in the face of the hazards is for the future to determine.

However, speaking for the world in general, I believe that our security lies in our full knowledge of the dangers of Bolshevism. The story can't be told too often.

Clergyman Burns to Death

Norfolk, Va., May 29 (AP) — The Rev. Joseph H. Mann, Norfolk Negro minister, died today of burns received under mysterious circumstances last Saturday night.

Mann, 38, told police he was abducted by two white men as he was walking along a Norfolk street late Saturday.

He said the abductors told him: "We want you to help us run some Negroes out."

Then, he was quoted by police, the men took him to the house of another Negro, set fire to the house and pushed him into the flames.

A witness, Robert Simpson, 27, saw the clergymen stumbling away from the blaze with his clothing and another Negro, set fire to the house and pushed him into the flames.

Neighbors extinguished the house fire which did only minor damage. Gasoline-soaked towels were found at the scene.

HOLC Has Gone Out of Business

New York, May 29 (AP) — The Home Owners Loan Corporation (HOLC) has gone out of business.

The government lending and mortgage-holding agency, which aided masses of people in the depression years, deposited a $14,000,000 surplus in the U. S. treasury yesterday as its final act.

All HOLC business had been conducted from a single office here in recent years.

The HOLC, established by congress in 1933, made investments of almost $3,500,000,000. Between 1933 and 1936, it refinanced 1,017,821 defaulted home loans. This was equivalent to one out of five of all the mortgages on owner-occupied homes in non-farm areas.

The agency stopped making loans in 1938. Since then, the staff had been occupied with collecting on mortgages.

Three Men Up on Rape Charge

Huntsville, Ala., May 29 (AP) — A preliminary hearing is scheduled Friday for three men, including a father and son, who are charged with rape.

Sheriff Oliver McPeters said the accused men were released yesterday in $2,500 bond each. He named them as Bob Thompson, 50; Clarence Thompson, 23, the son, and James M. Glover, 17.

A 30-year-old housewife accused them of taking her away from her home at knifepoint and raping her Saturday night. The men told officers she went willingly.

A Good Deed for Memorial Day Is to Sit Down, Write a Letter to a Boy in Korea

By HAL BOYLE

New York, May 30 (AP) — After visiting the graves of their loved ones this Memorial day, a lot of people are going to ask themselves:

"Isn't there something I can do for our live heroes, too?"

There is. You can sit down and write a letter to some boy in Korea. That'll be nice. He'll be glad to get it.

There's an ever nicer thing you can do. You can go visit a blood bank and contribute a pint. You'll find some other people have had the same thought — but not enough of them. You won't find the blood bank crowded. You can get in and get out in an hour.

David Mechanic, 27, a sailor, didn't wait until Memorial day. Sitting in the Brooklyn Red Cross center Monday, he explained why:

"I got back from Korea myself two days ago. I went to a navy hospital this morning. I saw a friend there I hadn't seen since last December. He had lost both legs — forlorn. I came here from the hospital."

Mechanic himself is still under medical treatment from battle wounds.

"They gave me two pints of blood in Korea," he said matter-of-factly. "I just want to pay it back. My folks are going to give blood, too, this week — my father, sister and brother-in-law. My mother wants to but she isn't well."

The young sailor was wounded in the evacuation of Hungnam last winter. He was piloting a Higgins boat loaded with troops being taken off the beach.

"A mortar shell hit us," he said. "There were 17 soldiers killed in my boat. I got hit in the face, leg and shoulder by shrapnel."

"I took off their dogtags. Then I pulled two wounded soldiers ashore, and collapsed on the beach."

For that he received a silver star for bravery.

Many veterans wounded in Korea now are coming in to volunteer their blood for comrades still over there.

Who else gives blood?

Well, a 58-year-old charwoman has given 32 pints. A postman with a broken leg arrived in a wheelchair to make his donation. A blind woman, accompanied by her seeing eye dog, has given several pints.

Fraternity and patriotic organizations have done fine work. One labor union with 3,800 members has given 2,300 pints. A savings bank set up a blood bank on its premises and collected 302 pints in one day. The president's office was turned into a baby sitter's department.

Altogether, however, the public reponse to the national blood program has been pretty apathetic. Since last August 1 the total collected is 1,171,892 pints, of which 409, 471 pints have been turned over to the military services. (They get all they ask.)

Most of this is converted into plasma which lasts for three years. Whole blood can be kept only for 2 days. The emergencies arise when battle casualties are high. Then whole blood is needed immediately in large quantities.

The fighting in Korea has been heavy the last few days.

If you give your blood on this Memorial day, it might help save an American soldier wounded 8,000 miles away on this same day. The blood you give this afternoon can reach him this weekend. It goes by air.

This is the fact that makes some volunteer workers in the national blood program bitter:

"The healthier people are the harder it is to get them to give to come back and give more."

The fact that makes them happy: a single pint of blood.

About 50 important U. S. crops require pollination by honey bees or other insects.

Marshall said the Red Cross blood donors program was largely responsible for the improved recovery rate.

The defense secretary made his remarks in a brief moving picture address shown at an afternoon night all star show at an afternoon night who donated a pint of blood for wounded soldiers in Korea.

Terms Johnson a Dreamer

Talpeh, Formosa, May 30 (AP) — South Koreans ambassador to Nationalist China today dubbed Senator Johnson (D-Colo.) "absurd beyond imagination — like a day-dreamer."

Hire fire was aroused by Johnson's recent proposal that a cease fire be ordered along Korea's 38th parallel June 25, the anniversary of the outbreak of war.

he ambassador, ex-premier Lee Bum Suk, said Johnson's proposal, if carried out, would mean all the United Nations blood split in Korea had been shed in vain.

"Senator Johnson," he said, "want to sell Korea to Stalin, the nerve center of world aggression."
